

LEADING COLLABORATION ON REMOTE, MATRIXED, GLOBAL TEAMS

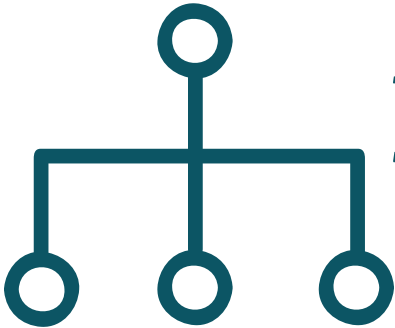

THRIVING IN THE MATRIX CAN BE TOUGH, YET YOU CAN HELP YOUR TEAM CUT THROUGH THE CLUTTER.

Ouch! Only 14% of matrixed employees strongly agree that their project leaders provide feedback to their manager about their performance. (Source: Gallup)

Even if you're currently blocked by silos, technology, and time zones, you'll leave with leadership strategies to improve your team's remote interactions. You'll also uncover the common traps so you can help them get unstuck before your project goes off the rails.

HOW YOU THOUGHT
WORK WOULD BE

HOW WORK
ACTUALLY IS

More ouch! Only 16% of matrixed employees agree that their organization's projects are well managed. (Source: Gallup)

Join this session to uncover frameworks and mindsets that can help you to help your team members show up at their best in the matrix.

60-MINUTE (LIVE) VIRTUAL TRAINING FOR LEADERS

WHAT'S IT ABOUT?

It's tough in the matrix. You can't see your team member's facial expression while you're chatting about an emotionally charged decision. You attend meetings at 11pm when you'd rather be sleeping. And you know your team is struggling to know who owns which part of which project.

In this session, you'll:

- 1) Consider Current Workplace Data On Remote And Matrixed Teams: How It Impacts Results
- 2) Explore 5 Key Elements That Drive Effective Performance In The Matrix.
- 3) Audit Your Projects For 3 Often-Overlooked Collaboration Traps.
- 4) Help Your Team See Their Tendencies To Live In (Or Brush Over) Each Of 4 Collaboration Spaces

COMMONLY OVERLOOKED COLLABORATION TRAPS

THREE COMMON COLLABORATION TRAPS

- 1 No Time Allocated For Collaboration
- 2 Assumptions And Misunderstandings
- 3 Complexities of Global, Matrixed Environments
